

580 WIBW-KAN Assisting Winter Convention Kansas Auctioneers Association

There'll be lots of crying, but it'll likely be in a jovial sense of the meaning this weekend.

That'll be auctioneers joking and jiving, as it's often impossible for them to cramp their chant, as it'll all be intermingled with official business of their talkative trade.

"The 57th annual winter convention of the Kansas Auctioneers Association is scheduled Thursday evening through Sunday, Jan. 10-13, at the Clarion Hotel, 530 Richards Drive, Manhattan," according to LaDonna Schoen-Gehring, executive director, right.

Sponsored in part by 580 WIBW and the Kansas Ag Network, both which association members use effectively in the auction advertising campaigns, the convention kicks off Thursday evening with registration and a directors' session.

"Friday is filled with educational seminars relating to the auction business, and will include a fun auction and competition," said Lance Fullerton, president, left.

"Voting for new leadership headlines Saturday morning's agenda, with educational seminars to continue throughout the day, and the annual meeting begins at 4:15 p.m.," Schoen-Gehring noted.

"The banquet at 6 p.m., Saturday, will be highlighted by announcement of champion auctioneers, scholarship winners and Hall of Fame inductees," related Dave Webb, past president, center.

On Sunday, there will be an inspiration worship at 9 a.m., following breakfast, and the upcoming year's leadership is to be installed at a noon luncheon, followed by those directors in official meetings.

Additional events are on tap for the Kansas Auctioneers Association Auxiliary both Friday and Saturday.
