

Farm Profitability Speakers Set For Garnett Seminar

Answers to agriculture questions for developing plans to improve record book margins are on tap for Garnett.

"The final in this year's four-part series of Farm Profit Seminars is scheduled for Wednesday evening March 18th," announced Greg Akagi.

Dan Holiday

Sponsored by the 580 WIBW Farm Department, which Akagi serves as director, the program will be at the Anderson County Junior/Senior High School, 110 West Highway 31.

The K-State Extension Frontier District is assisting with organization and planning for the seminar.

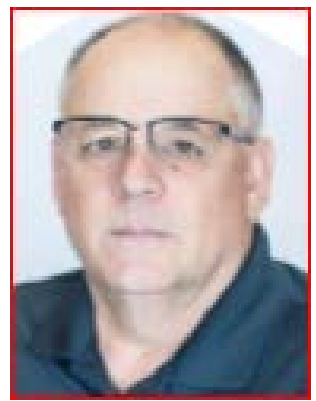

Nearly two dozen seminar sponsors will have booths for farmers and stockmen to tour when doors open at 5:30.

There'll be a complimentary supper at 6 o'clock with reservations required by calling 785-448-6826, or email reschaub@ksu.edu, or greg.akagi@alphamediausa.com.

Informational and entertaining agriculture speakers as coordinated by Akagi begin their presentations at 6:45.

"What's Up With The Weather?" is to be answered by renowned 580 WIBW weatherman Dan Holiday, meteorologist for The Storm Report.

Alan Maxwell, financial services officer for Frontier Farm Credit, will discuss how farmers can position operations for success in the current environment.
